Child Therapists Seek New Home

Dorothy Rand

Total Transformation, the rapidly up and coming child behavioral therapy organization, has run into a bid of hard times now that their growing success is requiring more room.

Playtime Development, having leased a suite in their new corporate office to the Total Transformation group, has made an executive decision that they will be unable to allocate more room to the growing organization.

This decision has led Total Transformation to begin looking for a new home, a place where they can experience their growing pains and will be able to adequately accommodate for such.

Claire Wordsworth, Manager of Public Relations for Total Transformation, was available for comment.

“It saddens us that this decision was made, but it gives us the opportunity to stretch our wings independently. We have the utmost respect for Playtime Development, and we understand where they are coming from; the decision comes with costs on both sides, and we wish the best for Playtime Development’s continued growth in the Nashville area.”

While Wordsworth was not available for further comment, a press release was given on their website, hinting at a new location being found on the other side of the city from Playtime Development headquarters, in the Belle Meade area.

Local Celebrity Found Dead in River Front Park

Just prior to 9 am on February 12th, the body of Psychic Hunters spokesperson and new Nashvillian Simone Croft was found washed ashore. Detectives with the Metropolitan Nashville Police Department have a suspect, but have yet to reveal the identity.

Body of Simone Croft Found

Jessica Pearson

The spokesperson of the recently cancelled television show Psychic Hunters was found washed up on the shores of the Cumberland River with numerous bullet wounds. Her body appeared waterlogged from multiple days exposure to the river, but there has been multiple reports describing a suspect the police are currently on the look for.

A description of the suspect has been released, and is currently running through television news reports. They are looking for a Caucasian man of Irish descent in his thirties, with short-cut brown hair and green eyes. He was clean shaven and was last wearing casual, solid colored clothing, though reports vary on the color and style of the clothing.

If there is any news or updates on the whereabouts of anyone matching this description, people are encouraged to call the MNPd crime hotline.

Disturbances in the Cemetery

Zoe Washburne

After more and more reports of war ghosts appearing in the Nashville National Cemetery, on top of the child’s disappearance, officials from both the TSA and the TBI have cordoned off the cemetery while an ongoing investigation takes place.

Citizens who wish to pay their respects to deceased heroes of war have begun to leave flowers along the edge, fearing that, even though officials are allowing people into the cemetery only under direct guard, they may be targeted by whatever is taking place in the cemetery.

While wild rumors are circulating about paranormal activity taking place, the TSA and TBI have not given an official statement, instead urging people that the disturbances are likely attributed to gangland activities with no respect for those that have given their lives.

TSA Agent Alexander Tross has been assigned the lead investigator on the case.

The homeless are disappearing from North Nashville. But who really cares about them, right? Makes the streets nicer...

A temporary interruption of power to the entire downtown area last week has some officials worried, but the 30 second outage has been all but forgotten by the populace at large.

The Antioch Farmer's Market Grand Opening is March 9th at 10 pm for an all night event. Will you be there?

Doesn't the description of the guy that killed Croft sounds oddly like a Nashville professor? I wonder...

Though rumors had surfaced months ago that O'Tolley's would finally be bringing a franchise location to Nashville, the plans have since been ended, though no official release has been presented.

The Wyrmfœ, who has been mostly hanging around in the background, seems to have taken to being silent ... and calm. Weird.

A kidnapped Master of the Rite and a rundown church just north of the city on the bank of the Cumberland River led to an intense, mental-physical battle. The woman behind it was thrown into the water and mystically killed by the spirit of the River. "She was not part of the deal that was struck."

Previously- After a surprise attack by cat-shifters, the Sept has entered into a very tenuous alliance with the shifters and their tribe, who has reported that they were attacked by Garou. Also, the mind of the metis Wyrmfœ seems to be strained, having babbled on about seemingly nonsensical things, of which the Silver Fangs have taken to ignoring for the time being. Metis are known for madness, after all.
