Child reported missing

Brett Dalton

A West Nashville neighborhood is crushed by the news of a missing child from their street. Chloe Bennet, age 7, was abducted while waiting for her school bus. Her distraught mother, Claire Bennet, states that she was waiting with the child at the bus stop when her daughter just disappeared.

"I only turned my head for a second. I felt her hand let go of mine and by the time I turned around to look she was gone."

According to the police there have been reports of a strange man being sighted around the neighborhood in the weeks leading up to the abduction. There is a reward for any information that leads to the return of Chloe to her family.

Construction begins on new housing project

Elizabeth Henstridge

Ground has been broken on the construction of a new housing project on the north side of the city. Occupying 30 acres of city-owned land this project is designed to alleviate housing concerns for individuals and families at poverty level. Project coordinator Aaron Malcomb told this paper "With the economy as it is we are seeing a rise in the numbers of Nashvillians who are at or below the poverty line. Our hope is to provide them with a roof over their heads and a place to keep them off of our streets."

Construction is expected to be completed by the end of the year.

Police chief seeks out "Flash Video Mobs"

Iain De Caestecker

In a public statement this week, Police Chief Lucas Patterson announced that he is seeking to put a stop to the unannounced video shoots that have been occurring throughout the city.

"While this city prides itself on its moniker 'The Music City' these unplanned video shoots must stop. The use of pyrotechnics and light reflecting surfaces on public streets is a safety hazard and the impromptu use of these devices are a threat to the safety of the citizens of this city."

The most recent incident of this nature involved the use of reflective surfaces to make an area look darker than the rest of the street and pyrotechnics to produce lightning strike effects near the NES Building.

Weekly Weird Report

Jack Bean

There's been rumblin's about rumblings here in the city. They say a darkness is comin' – something's makin' things softer, makin' the poor poorer and the rich greedier. That warehouse church has started gathering a bad crowd and they seem to be breaking up. It seems like wherever they go things just don't work like they used to. Maybe those good-for-nuthin' cultists are trying to get back at their fellows that kicked them outta their churches?

I saw the girl disappear – I watched her just vanish without a trace.

That new house project can't come soon enough. Maybe we'll be able to get all of the trash together on Dickerson Road?

I can't wait to see the video that came out of that shoot a couple of weeks back – they had a full blackout going, lightning storms, and I thought they moved a telephone pole around! It's gonna be one wicked video.

The Guardians and the Free Council finally agree on something...

The Arrows are getting antsy – they seem to think the Seers are going to strike back.

Mynd Phreak has been spending a bit of time with the new guy. Looks like the Council's already got their hooks in him.

Jack needs to be careful. I get that being an apostate that he can do things, but he's really pushing some boundaries. Publishing in a public newspaper? What else could he be up to?
