Homeland Security Partners with Local Law Enforcement

Sandy Lerner

The Department of Homeland Security announced a partnership with the city of Nashville and state of Tennessee on Monday, with plans to open an office in the capitol and work with local law enforcement agencies and security companies to better protect the citizens of the state. With a temporary office located at Peabody and Fourth street, the majority of DHS agents who have been consulting with the local governments will be departing for Washington DC, leaving a skeleton staff to set up the new local office.

David W. Purkey, Assistant Commissioner and Homeland Security Advisor spoke at a press conference on Monday, "Governor Bill Haslam announced today the federal government will provide assistance to all federal security districts in Tennessee, with offices based in District 5, namely, Nashville. It is in the interest of supporting the necessary operations that we have formed this mutually beneficial agreement, and I expect it to assist us in maintaining public safety into the future."

Further announcements are expected in the near future as the Department settled into Nashville and Tennessee.

Major Fire in Christiana Devastates Business

Arson is now suspected in the conflagration that destroyed buildings and vehicles in a fire in storage yard. A witness reports a number of people, believed to be migrant workers, were seen in the yard on Thursday night, the night that the fire began. The fire continued to burn through Friday.

Arson case in North Nashville

Particia Holmes

A vacant home in North Nashville was set on fire by a person or persons unknown. The 4:00 am fire on 23rd Avenue North was reported by neighbors calling 911 when they observed flames shooting out of the windows. Fire dispatchers quickly sent crews to the blaze, extinguishing it, but only after substantial damage had been incurred.

Nashville Fire spokeswoman Kim Lawson told reporters that the occupants had recently moved out of the house, and no one was injured.

As of press time this morning, the fire marshal was investigating the scene, searching for a cause, but had not yet identified a motive that seemed to fit the fire.

Multiple Fires reported in Home

Wende Zomnir

A blaze was reported shortly after midnight early Saturday morning at a private residence on Seifried Street and 25th Avenue North in Nashville. The fire has been deemed suspicious, and spokespeople for the Nashville Fire Department said several small fires were extinguished inside the home, leading them to believe that the fire could be the result of arson.

A tip earlier in the evening reported that somebody had been seen entering the back of the house was not responded to due to more urgent calls. A blue station wagon in poor condition was spotted on the block around the same time.

At the time of the fire, the home was undergoing renovations and there were no people residing inside the building.

People in the Gulch are continuing to have visions. Some hipsters are moving out, while others are moving in to get on the scene early.

Vanderbilt is investigating a case of a young child being cured of an osteosarcoma – some kind of bone cancer. The family just converted to Catholicism and consider it a miracle. The doctors don't know what to thing, because it was too advanced to treat.

What's up with the Hermitage Hotel? Not only did they build a bunch of stuff there, it's closed down. I thought that Gideon was grooming it as Elysium? There were a bunch of ghouls in there...

Pauline and Owen have clearly had sex at this point. They were seen walking hand in hand, looking in each other's eyes like lovers.

Before Owen and Lazarus sat in their fancy chairs, they both helped open up the southern tunnels beneath Elysium - tunnels that were said to be forbidden. Shouldn't they be held accountable if the beasts beneath Elysium is unleashed?

Hey, the tunnels are, like, gone, man!

No Carthian has been seen in Elysium since the Praxis. Then, yesterday, IronWind showed up at Elysium and snooped around. Odd.
